Where Social Power Lies Upon?

Each society are comprised from diverse classes, of differing races, mingled, working hard in fellowship, aiding one another. Being within the same place necessitates greeting one another.

Everyone in a society must portray themselves in a friendly manner and striving to aid one another. Or failing this, residence within the same community requires interaction and the maintenance of good behaviour. For otherwise, social sanction may ensue.

Should any action cause discomfort to others, immediate protest may be forthcoming, or, further, a report to those of higher station. This will undoubtedly cause unease and a sense of discomfort for those in the same locale.

Society Decorum

Therefore, lest such unpleasantries befall, many then strive to maintain decorum, to follow convenances, to pertain appropriateness, to keep our behaviour in certain suitability, to obey the rules, to follow the law, honouring custom, respecting culture and upholding the societies traditions and take grace on their uphold belief, and eschew social transgressions of any kind.

Herein lies the power of society. In its capacity to maintain communal behaviour, to uphold the rules, to adhere to the unwritten laws, or though not custom nor prescribed norm, the quiet enforcement of unspoken social regulations in the community may be the role of unseen societal influence.

From this very example, we may find a measure of tranquillity regarding the worst scenarios. Where the intrusion of a new race or region might seem a threat to a community. In fact, in any society, and under any conditions of liberty, however free, there ever remains the role of social power to aid the authorities in the maintenance of peaceful and safe communities.

Improving Social Power

Our differences, they do greatly serve to instruct us in the application of the instruments and graces bestowed upon us, yea, we have much at stake.

Everyone that has emigrates to certain place where they come to live. All of them are hoping to create better future for their family, for their offsprings.

This duty as global citizen making everyone must improve their usual behaviour and do betterment on every aspect of their live. For that, all global citizens, whether they are new emigrates citizens, or the one that are the offsprings of the country where they reside, must work together helping each other to carry out the improvements that are within their power.

All who emigrate to a new dwelling place do so with the hope of securing a brighter future for their families and posterity. This imperative, incumbent upon every global citizen, necessitates an elevation of conduct and a diligent betterment of all facets of life. Toward this end, all global citizens, whether recent arrivals or the native-born, must collaborate and assist one another in effecting those improvements within their capacity.

The Most Feeble Connections

In every society, everywhere, there are combinations of many races. All of us are trying at our best to help one another, to maintain peace, to respect one another, and to give each other the needed support they must have to be happily living and be at equal with the other citizen in a community.

As a citizen, we are not just neighbour to each other. But also, as friends that supports, gives out helps, cheering each other, greets and smiling when meet, and saying good day, good morning, or good afternoon.

Even more than that, as neighbour, the social connection that being mutually given towards one another can be just like brothers and sisters, to have one community life as a big peaceful family of friends from multi races.

We must learn to follow the rules, without giving in to unnecessary obedience, and be able to defend ourselves from the various social pressures that may disturb us. To continue building the world and the future independently, with full freedom and responsibility.

Diversity = Peace

We are bound to observe the prescribed norms, eschewing servile compliance, and fortified against the manifold social pressures that might assail us. To continue constructing the world and the future with unfettered liberty and the full measure of responsibility.

When looking at diversity in one area, what can make different races live together peacefully, and lighten each other's burdens as a community that supports each other.

In a workplace, the existing diversity must continue to be maintained by enforcing regulations that all races have support to get the same opportunities. In this way, it is attempted so that no one or more parts of society will feel disadvantaged.

In this way, we will be able to reduce the number of violations of regulations, and furthermore, create peace in an area, so that it is impossible to emerge in that area, an idea from a certain part of society that might provide ideas that are detrimental or destructive.

Cooperations = Mutual Progress

In a society where we live, what we do is work together, help each other, lighten each other's burdens, give each other gifts. So that in the society where we live, a sense of comfort, friendship, brotherhood can grow.

The growth of a sense of bond to regulations, to the laws of friendship and brotherhood in a society that occurs reciprocally and mutually beneficial.

As one society, all has the same intended aspire, that we might labour, unenslaved by adversity, unscorched by affliction.

When considering the multifaceted nature of our communities, what measures might foster harmonious coexistence amongst peoples of diverse backgrounds, and alleviate the burdens borne by each?

In the realm of employment, existing diversity must be upheld through the diligent application of regulations ensuring equitable opportunity for all races.

Climate of Fairness

Thus, we strive to foster a sense of fair treatment where every individual member of society does not experience disadvantage.

In this way, the incidence of infraction will wane, and, further, concord will prevail within the community, preventing the emergence of discordant or destructive impulses within any segment of society.

In the interconnected society in which we reside, we strive to cooperate, to assist one another, to bear one another's burdens, and bestow upon one another our blessings.

That through these actions, a climate of comfort, amity, and fraternity shall blossom in our community. The reciprocation of these supportive sentiments leads to a greater commitment to equitable regulations, the bonds of friendship, and a virtuous society.

Social Attributions

How a society can give each other respect and appreciation. How in one community, the various talents possessed by its people, from any age range, can be recognized, developed, grown, and then given the opportunity to be able to make their greatest contribution to building the country.

Not only that, in addition to being able to recognize their own strengths, we must also provide awareness to the community of certain expectations from the government, of directions to make various improvements in various aspects and aspects of life.

That if there is something that is still felt lacking in society, then what must be done is to strengthen each other, by aiding each other when needed, or even before it is needed, we can be more sensitive to the shortcomings of our friends, to then provide the motivation needed so that the problem can be resolved.

Seeing With Our Third Eyes

Sometimes even though we do not advise others, but by giving them a better perspective on the problems they face, then they will automatically be able to help themselves to be independent, build better habits.

To change themselves from various bad things that they previously did, become more advanced, master a lot of new knowledge, with internal encouragement that we grow from the self-confidence that they find themselves.

How a society might cultivate mutual respect and appreciation, whereby the diverse talents of its members, of all ages, may be recognised, nurtured, and empowered to contribute their utmost to the nation's betterment.

Furthermore, alongside acknowledging individual strengths, it behoves us to enlighten the community concerning the expectations incumbent upon the government, regarding directions for advancement in numerous facets of life.

Cultivating Sensitivity

Should deficiencies persist within society, then mutual support, readily offered both prior to and during times of need, must be paramount. We must cultivate sensitivity towards the shortcomings of our fellow citizens, and endeavour to motivate them to affect their own resolutions.

Sometimes, even without offering counsel, providing a fresh perspective on their challenges may enable individuals to affect their own improvement, fostering independence, better habits, and advancement beyond past shortcomings; and this arises from the self-confidence they discover within.

Perhaps viewing a child deemed "naughty" as one with a fervent spirit, brimming with innovative ideas and resilient in overcoming obstacles, could be a more beneficial approach. Such a child is not inherently wayward, but resourceful, and imbued with extraordinary fortitude.

A society that can shift its negative perceptions of the developing younger generation will likely foster a stronger, more resilient community.

Endless Resorts and Reinforcement

Maybe by giving our friend or neighbour a new perspective, regarding his child who he considers naughty. No, he is just a child with a very high fighting spirit. See how he has a lot of ideas to overcome the various problems he faces. Even without help, he can overcome various difficult obstacles. He is not naughty, but very resourceful and has an extraordinarily strong fighting spirit.

A society that can change their negative views of the young generation that is still developing, will be able to grow a stronger society.

That children and teenagers are not there to be accused and judged, but to be supported and developed. That no matter how naughty a child is, he is not a source of problems. In fact, many things can be developed from children who have many ideas, and a strong fighting spirit.

Providing creativity education, can also help children who have many ideas. They with the extra energy they have, need emotional outlets and need various types of multi-jobs or multi-activities that must be given the opportunity to be able to do.

Fertile Perceptions

Because children with great potential like this can become delinquents just because they are bored. Can disturb other children just because they are annoyed even though there is no reason whatsoever.

Children and teenagers are not individuals to be condemned but rather those needing support and development. Regardless of perceived misbehaviour, they are not the source of problems; instead, their abundant ideas and spirited determination can become fertile ground for growth.

Moreover, nurturing creativity can empower children with abundant ideas. They require outlets for their energy and diversified pursuits which must be facilitated. For such exceptionally gifted children may turn wayward through boredom, becoming disruptive to others without justification.

Equality = Equilibrium

The government's desire to foster a sense of self-confidence in this community must also be given fairly and evenly to any community. Including in a society that has a lot of delinquency, social violations, crime, etc.

That even though there have been many violations of the law, or there are members of society who have committed a detrimental act, they can still be reprimanded and given direction to change.

Give chances and supported when they start to show good behaviour that shows the person's desire to be socially responsible.

Enforce everyone the courage to change to be better, that everyone are able and capable to be success and can restore themselves and the community that was previously viewed negatively.

That everyone has the same rights to become members of the state with high social awareness. With an increased sense of responsibility, even greater, because they realize that they have done something detrimental.

Cultivating Responsibilities

The growth of this sense of social obligation is the hope desired by the authorities everywhere. That as state administrators, we all have the desire to provide freedom to the community.

However, this type of freedom must still be accountable and not harm others. Does not violate other people's basic rights. Does not make other people feel disturbed, depressed, and does not make other people objects for social violations.

As the government's earnest desire to cultivate a spirit of self-reliance within this community must be equitably extended to every community.

Encompassing even those within a society marred by delinquency, social transgression, and criminal activity. It is, however, to be noted that despite infractions of the law, or acts that are detrimental to the fabric of society.

Any individuals may be admonished and guided towards amendment and supported as they demonstrate a nascent commitment to social responsibility.

Progressive Reintegration

The development of a society without misjudge, will cultivating progressive perspective towards one another. The feeling of mutual respects that are being equally shared, will grew and manifested improvement of good conduct.

The behaviour changes that indicative of the individual's yearning to reintegrate into society, may restore both the individual and the community to a higher regard, transforming former detractors into productive members of the state, imbued with an enhanced, and indeed heightened, sense of civic duty, growing from the acknowledgement of past wrongdoing.

The fostering of such a sense of social obligation is a paramount aim of all governing bodies. We, as stewards of the state, aspire to provide freedom to the community.

Yet, such liberty must be tempered with accountability, refraining from any infringement upon the fundamental rights of others. It must not engender disquiet, depression, nor serve as an occasion for further social transgression.

Equal Pathways to Ignites Achievements

We must open the eyes of every member of society that he or she is still given the opportunity to be seen as good, no matter how bad he sees himself. If, he or she shows the intention to change, by improving his or her attitude and words, improving his or her bad treatment of others, and by providing support to change for people who have had cases between members of society.

That there are many ideas, paths, methods, ideas, from various problem solving. That there are always many equal opportunities for everyone, anyone, anywhere, from any race, any social background, any economic condition.

That all of them have proven to have advantages and achieve various extraordinary successes.

These various achievements, in addition to being proof that everyone can change to be very great and extraordinary, from any bad situation.

Also become a real portrait of a picture of a struggle that does not easily give up. About a positive outlook on life. That various highest dreams can be defeated with determination and hard work that never tire or give up in it.

A society with a large carrying capacity like this, will be able to grow solidly, with strong community resilience. In one area with a progressive and growing community perspective like this, we can anchor many hopes about progress, about welfare, and about extraordinary achievements that can be realized, together.

Principle Bound Societies

The various dreams of any government can be built together. If only, we give each member of society the opportunity to become a living and cooperative community, respecting each other's principles.

In an equal society, one principle will not be forced on others. That way, a model of equality will be formed, and a community that respects each other will be formed.

From there, we can make this community move dynamically. That with the existing diversity, there will be a lot of understanding of different traditions, different beliefs, different principles, different behaviours and habits.

All of them can be supported to co-exist. That from the many existing communities, responsible and respectful connections can be formed as components of a learning society, which has the desire to move progressively towards high progress.

Humbly acknowledging the government's earnest desire to cultivate a spirit of self-assuredness within this community, this aspiration must be extended equitably to all communities, even within a society marred by delinquency, societal infractions, and criminal activity.

Though many transgressions against the law, or regrettable acts committed by certain members of society, may occur, these individuals can still be admonished and guided towards amendment, supported in their nascent displays of responsible conduct that manifest a deep-seated desire for social rectitude.

Such individuals, when shown support, can restore themselves and the community, previously viewed with a degree of apprehension, to become esteemed members of the state with a heightened consciousness of social responsibility.

An even greater sense of obligation, occasioned by their acknowledgement of past transgressions. The cultivation of this sense of civic duty is the foundation upon which the varied aspirations of any just government may be built.

Accordance of Equal Access

Whence comes the hope that every member of society shall be afforded access to the opportunity for constructive participation within a harmonious and cooperative community, respecting the fundamental principles of everyone.

In a just and equitable society, no single principle should be imposed upon another; this very process fosters the development of a model of equality, in which the community adheres to principles of mutual respect.

Hence shall this community be brought into a dynamism of progress. Thus, the extant diversity of traditions, beliefs, principles, behaviours, and customs will engender a deep empathy for these divergent expressions.

All of which may be supported within a harmonious framework. From the burgeoning myriads of communities, responsible and respectful connections may be fashioned, forming the very essence of a learning society, striving towards progressive advancement and prosperity.
